Calls For Service Density

The density of calls shown above was created using ESRI's Spatial Analyst software. Questions often arise when viewing this type of map, such as, "How many calls are represented by the yellow area?" This question cannot be answered directly because the density is created by dividing the area into cells and assigning each cell a value by searching a specific area around each cell for other calls. The area searched is different every time the search is performed because calls can be closer or farther apart each month. The values assigned to each cell are done so with the use of a filter in order to make transitions appear smoother. The most effective way of using this map is to take from it the idea that the colored areas are a representation of the relative density of the calls to one another.

The information contained in this report is intended to show basic trends. It is not intended to replace any official statistical report. The data analyzed here is recorded, stored and maintained by the Law Enforcement Support Agency and is represented with permission from LESA.

Priority Two and Three Pending Call Times

The times displayed on this page show the average number of minutes that each call, by priority type, pends prior to being dispatched. This can be interpreted as a level of backlogged activity – in other words: how long does it take before a unit is available?

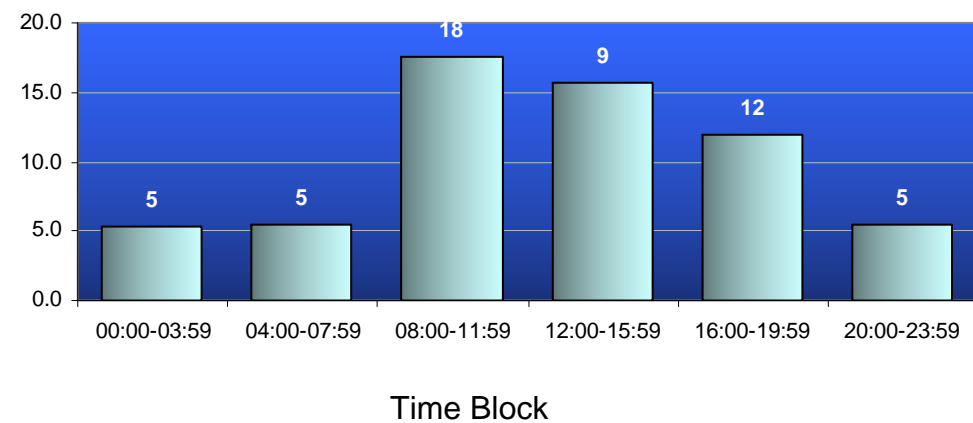

Priority Two Calls
Time Blk	M	T	W	Th	F	Sat	Sun
00:00-03:59	0.0	2.3	1.1	0.3	3.8	0.0	0.3
